Legal Community Unites to Support Food Bank For New York City's Annual Justice Served Campaign

New York, January 30, 2018 —Law firms and corporate legal departments are once again taking the lead in support of Justice Served, an annual campaign aimed at ending hunger in the city. The program supports Food Bank For New York City, the city's major hunger-relief organization. In 2017, Justice Served provided more than 500,000 meals for New Yorkers in need, topping the 300,000 meals raised in the inaugural 2016 campaign.

"The New York legal community's efforts have been tremendous," said Lary Stromfeld, a Cadwalader partner and founder of Justice Served. "I am humbled by the enthusiasm and generosity of everyone involved with this initiative. We're really making a difference in people's lives."

The Justice Served 2018 campaign, which runs from February 5 through March 16, is currently open to new sponsors and contributors. For more information about donations and volunteer opportunities, visit www.foodbanknyc.org/events/justice-served/.

Several law firms have already committed their support, including Alston & Bird, Cadwalader, Carter Ledyard & Milburn, Dentons US, Jones Day, Kramer Levin, McLaughlin & Stern, O'Melveny, Paul Weiss, Ropes & Gray, Sidley Austin, Skadden, Weil Gotshal and White & Case. Sponsors also include the law departments of Goldman Sachs, Morgan Stanley and Wells Fargo.

"One in five New Yorkers depend on Food Bank in their struggle to put food on the table," said Margarett Purvis, President and CEO of Food Bank For New York City. "The legal community has truly embraced Justice Served, and it's an excellent example of how we can come together to end hunger in our city. We thank all of the firms for their dedication."

Food Bank For New York City provides approximately 62 million free meals annually to approximately 1.4 million New Yorkers through a network of 1,000 charities and schools in the city's five boroughs. Adds Stromfeld, who is a member of Food Bank's board, "Food Bank plays a crucial role in our city, and it seems to bring out the best in New Yorkers."
