Let's Talk Podcasts

April 26, 2024

If you're planning that summer road trip or flight, maybe now is the time to line up the listening material. We surveyed our team for the best fund finance related podcasts, and here's what we came up with. Let us know if you have favorites that should be added to the list.

Dry Powder: The Private Equity Podcast. Hosted by Hugh McArthur, chairman of Bain's global private equity practice, Dry Powder covers themes in private markets and features interviews with industry leaders. The Jan. 23, 2024, episode on the evolution of the secondaries market would be a great starting point.

Invest Like the Best with Patrick O'Shaughnessy. Frequent interviews with founders and subject matter experts range across private market themes and history. The treasure trove of past interviews with titans like Doug Leone, Charlie Munger, and Lee Ainslie is well worth exploring.

Money Stuff: The Podcast. Matt Levine's long-running newsletter is now a podcast. While this one is less directly tied to private markets, Matt's background as an M&A lawyer and an investment banker lead to some unique takes.

PEI Spotlight. This is the podcast extension of Private Equity International's market-leading private markets reporting and analysis.
